Gold in Hardin County.

Within seven miles of the Summit gold mine another rich vein of gold has been struck, says the Elizabethtown News, and although the matter has been kept secret the mine has been worked to a considerable extent. Joe Dodson, a practical miner of fifteen years experience and coming recommended by Simon Schiller, of Cincinnati, has examined the mine and spent three days in close investigation. He was surprised at the richness and says that it will yield more than $75 in pure gold to the ton. The extent of the gold vein, of course, like all mines, cannot be determined until it is worked, but his judgment is that it will get richer. Mr. Dodson is now examining Summit mine for Terry & Condit, and will make a report Saturday. Mr. Terry is receiving a number of letters daily from prospectors in the East and other parties who are interested in his discovery. A party from Kansas was at the mine last week and wanted to purchase an option on the mine. This was refused and he went back to consult with other parties with the view of making an offer for a coal purchase. If the gold vein being developed continues to turn out as well as they are now doing the whole county will be swarmed with prospectors. A territory of about ten miles square from the Summit mine is equally as rich in the ore.

Running sores, indolent ulcers and similar troubles, even though of many years' standing, may be cured by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It soothes, strengthens and heals. It is the great pile cure.—Short & Haynes.

Sam Glascock's Flyer.

Elizabethtown News.
Sam Glascock's trotting horse Pansy is a most remarkable animal. After being driven in a buggy all the summer and with no special care given him other than to feed him, he was driven a half mile over the Fair Ground track the last day of the fair in 1912. With a little training he could easily go a mile inside of 2:30. Mr. Glascock will take him to the Bardonia Fair next week.

New Postal Law.

The new postal law that makes a good all time of money sent in registered letters where the rate is $10 or less is now in effect. The law is a good one and enables people to send small sums to any part of the country with the assurance that they will not suffer loss. Just why $10 should be the limit is not readily understood.

HIS KLONDIKE LETTER.

Dear Billy, I promised to write you a letter this week, and I did. I am in a bit of a hurry, but I will try to get it done. I am in a bit of a hurry, but I will try to get it done. I am in a bit of a hurry, but I will try to get it done.

For dinner I am now, with dressing of glistering food, and one dressed of glistering food, and one dressed of glistering food, and one dressed of glistering food, and one dressed of glistering food.

And yet upon frequent occasions I get at a champagne hour. Around me the music "practically" the music can ever afford.

I feel upon me the music "practically" the music can ever afford. I feel upon me the music "practically" the music can ever afford.

Tom Smith, who came with us, is lying in bed in a grave in the snow. He said: "I am lucky to go. I am in a bit of a hurry, but I will try to get it done."

And old Uncle Jimmy McCarthy, a Scotch Creek miner, is gone. He was in a bit of a hurry, but I will try to get it done. He was in a bit of a hurry, but I will try to get it done.

He Converted the Duke.
During his visit to the United States the late Duke of Marlborough made a host of friends. His quick eye, commanding manner and ability to grasp easily the many-sided electrical questions won the honest admiration of the practical Yankee, whose idea of an English duke differed in every way from the real, live British peer. Upon one occasion, however, the old dominating spirit of the duke gained the upper hand, and he paid for the temporary lapse from republican manners with a few good bruises and a rather severe shaking up of the dorsal frame.

The duke was making a tour of inspection over one of the Chicago cable lines, and he was in the car when he was struck by a cable car driver who was a typical Yankee, born and bred in the state of Connecticut.

"Can you stop the car quickly?" asked his duke.

"I just reckon you kin bet yer life I can," Mr. Duke.

"How soon?"

"In 'bout two yards," replied the Yankee.

"Noncense!" sharply exclaimed his duke. The next moment the duke was being picked himself out of a small car by the side of the train line, into which the abrupt stoppage of the car had thrown him.

He quietly brushed himself the Yankee asked remarked: "I hope you ain't hurt, Mr. Duke. Guess you think I kin stop my spirit now, don't ye?"—London Telegraph.

Being Marned With His Kudos.
The Kurdish chief and his elder sons stroked their beards and ejaculated "Marnak!" whenever their European guest put his fork in his mouth. "My father, why does the Firangi eat with a fork?" a little Kurd asked at last, but all the answer he got was a sneer from his father, at which he cried bitterly.

To console him I gave him a spoonful of marmalade, which terrified him, he feared of being punished again for bad manners, he seized the spoon and gulped it down like a pill, saying, "Avolia Effendi." He must have liked it all the same, for soon afterward the father came and asked me what the "tail" was. I gave him the pot, which he emptied. Murad then held the knife and fork and shut them with a click into a metal clasp knife. This put too great a strain on the chief's curiosity, and he asked to see it. After a careful examination he remarked sarcastically, "In truth, only in Firangiistan can they make such things of beauty."—"Big Horn" of the "Aide Through Western Asia."

In Self Defense.
"Yes," said the man who was relating the experience, "I am usually a peaceful and law-abiding citizen, but on that occasion I joined the infuriated mob and threw stones at the militia."

"You didn't?"

"Yes. I knew that if the militia began to shoot the infuriated mob would probably escape, while the innocent spectators would get hurt."—New York Spectator World.

His '97 Model.
"Did you get a new bicycle this year?" inquired the newspaper man.

"Oh, dear, no!" replied the artist. "I couldn't afford it. I am still riding the one I got last year."

"But I heard you speak of your '97 model?"

"Yes. She's a novice who has just begun to pose for me this summer."—Chicago Post.

Hardy Run Boston Fishermen.
The great "Yankee" fishermen are mostly Nova Scotians, but the captain of our fishing vessels are, as a rule, Americans, hardy, self-reliant, quick to think and to act and ready for any emergency. While the dorries are out on the coast, with the aid of the cook, hand the ship and keep his weather eye on the horizon. If he sees danger in any form, he sets a signal—usually a basket hoisted in the fore stowed halyard.

—to recall the dorries. Only too often, though, the gale comes up with such suddenness that the dorries are lowered cannot get back. A dory with the bodies of two fishermen in it or more frequently empty or tossed bottom up by the waves tells the story. Yet in spite of the danger of starvation a jag of water usually constitutes all the provision aboard a dory, and a compass is a rare bird.—Gustav Kobbe in St. Nicholas.

The Peacock at Home.
The real home of the peacock or peafowl is in India. There they were and are hunted, and their flesh is used for food. As these birds live in the same region as the tiger, peacock hunting is a very dangerous sport. The long tail of the peacock is not its tail, as many suppose, but is composed of feathers which grow out just above the tail and are called the tail coverts. Peacocks have been known for many hundreds of years. They are mentioned in the Bible. Job mentions them, and they are mentioned, too, in 1 Kings 2. Hundreds of years ago in Rome many thousand peacocks were killed for the banquet tables of the emperor made. The brains of the peacock were considered a great treat, and many had to be killed for a single feast.

Right There.
"Is there anything else in belts this season?" inquired the customer.

"Yes, sir," replied the pretty salesgirl, incidentally blushing. "What else, please?"—Chicago Tribune.

WALKED AFTER HIS HEAD WAS ON.

By Lyle, the French physician, who has greatly interested himself in the question, "What pains in the head of a dejected human being?" relates the following remarkable story, which he has taken from the archives of the Vienna court. It was in the year— that Schoenberg, a well known laundress, and four of his associates were caught and condemned to death. They were already on their knees ready to pay the price of their bloody deeds by any means, when the laundress, who was sitting to the awful fate of dejection when Schoenberg addressed the judge, asking that his four companions might be pardoned on certain conditions. "If," asked the laundress, "I am released, I get up and walk to the first of my neighbors, and you pardon him." The judge thought that he was pretty well in sympathy with the request, and he said, "You pardon him." "If I walk to the second, the third and the fourth, will you pardon them also?" The judge replied that such a miracle feat could be performed he would obtain pardon for the other three also. The laundress was now satisfied, and, bending his head, he received the fatal blow. Instantly the head rolled down in the sand, but to the surprise and horror of all present the headless trunk arose and walked alone. Alas! it appeared, the body walked around until it passed the first, the second, the third and the fourth condemned laundress, when it fell down and was crushed. "Quarry, how could a headless body walk?"

The Short Steps of the Train.
Sustained speed, from end to end of a run, is not merely a matter of high speed between stations. It involves the skill of the train conductor. The more stops there are the more important is promptness at stations. The observant man who travels much cannot fail to notice the effect on train speed of the number of stops. The more stops there are the more important is promptness at stations. The observant man who travels much cannot fail to notice the effect on train speed of the number of stops.

White Slaves of Old England.
Eight hundred years ago all of the large cities of England had regular slave markets for the sale of white slaves from all parts of the kingdom. In the "Life of Bishop Walsingham" the writer says: "It was a moving sight to see in the public market rows of young people of both sexes tied together and sold like cattle-men, unwieldy of their obligations, delivering into slavery their relatives and even their own children." In another part of this work it is noted that these slaves were "particularly young women of fine proportions and of great beauty."

There is a young girl, whose name we will withhold, and lives in this city, evidently has a bright future in store for her.

She is talented, and has a very charming voice. She comes from a prominent family and if the proper training be her before she is too late, will, as a singer, strike the keynote to success.

New Depot.

Through the many efforts of Civil Engineer, H. Hudson, of the Henderson road, the old depot in this city will be a thing of the past. Work will be commenced at once. The plans and specifications are nearly ready, and the new depot will be built on the North side of the road and promises to be a cozy one.

It will have two waiting rooms with modern conveniences.

Bride Explores.

An explosion of a strange character and which the mystery has not yet been solved, took place Sunday at about the hour of 1 o'clock, in front of Payne & Co.'s hardware store. In front of the store stands a pile of brick in which one had been accidentally knocked off by a bird to the ground; no sooner had it struck the ground than it exploded as though some one had fired a pistol. The report was heard some distance away and caused a great deal of excitement for a while.

TO THE REPUBLICAN OF BRECKENRIDGE COUNTY: In pursuance to a call of the Republican Committee of the Ninth District, composed of the counties of Breckinridge, Grayson, Hardin and Meade, you are notified to meet in mass convention in Henderson, Ky., on Saturday Sept. 25, 1907, at 1 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of electing delegates to the district convention, which meets at West Point on Tuesday, Sept. 25, 1907 at 1 o'clock to nominate candidates for Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney.

CLINT P. HOOK, Secretary, Henderson, Ky., Sept. 9, 1907.

Overcome With Heat.

Word came to this city Sunday, at about 10 o'clock, that Mr. Morris Board, cashier of the Bank of Henderson, was in a serious condition from a severe sun stroke, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Skiffman, residing on Harrison street, he had been sitting on the porch of Mr. Murray's front porch apparently in perfect health. Medical aid was immediately summoned and found his condition to be alarming. The supposition is that the excessive heat and the walk to Mr. Skiffman's was due to his being overcome. Mr. Board has greatly improved and his many friends will be glad to hear that it will be but a few days until he can resume his duties at the bank.

Two Weddings.

There will be two weddings in this town to-day. Mr. Emmett Gregory will wed Miss Mary Talbot at the Methodist church at 9 o'clock. They will take the train for Louisville and there they go to the Nashville Exposition.

Mr. Charles Wadkins to Miss Sallie Daniels at her home on the hill at 9 o'clock. They go to Nashville.

Rev. S. G. Shelby will officiate at both. It is no use for us to say that there is no blessing, blooming youngsters a happy life, for we do. The brightest of gems of which a happy wedding is so full can be theirs if they so will. Our advice is for them to keep in love each day, each hour, and the more they love the happier they will be.

Death of Two Old Citizens.

Robert Payne, residing about four miles east of Henderson, died last week. He had been in feeble health for some time and death was the result of old age and a general giving away of his physical forces. He was in his eighty-third year. Mr. Payne has been a resident of the county many years and has reared a large family. He was a member of the Lost Run Baptist church. His remains were interred at the old Scott burying ground attended by a large company of friends.
